

Tobacco Groups Fight Proposed Levy on Cigarettes

Tell Joint Committee Industry in Wisconsin Would be Hit

Madison—(P)—Tobacco growers, jobbers and retailers voiced vigorous opposition yesterday to a proposed levy on cigarettes. The measure, which would be considered by the joint committee on finance, would be a tax of 2 cents a package on cigarettes and an additional tax on cigarette papers.

Senator E. G. Sauld (D), Pembine, author of the measure, claimed it would net about $3,000,000 to be earmarked for relief purposes, but opponents said $1,500,000 would be more nearly correct.

Emphasizing a need for adequate revenue at an early date, Sauld said state WPA rolls had been reduced from $5,000 to $75,000, and that another 18,000 persons were waiting for WPA jobs.

He said the tax would not harm Wisconsin tobacco growers because no Wisconsin tobacco is used in cigarettes.

This statement was disputed by Stanley W. Slagg, Stoughton, representing the Wisconsin Leaf Tobacco Growers Association, who said four major cigarette companies were in the Wisconsin tobacco market.

He declared the tax would have a "detrimental effect" on Wisconsin growers because tobacco already is heavily taxed by the federal government, adding that a smoker consuming a package of cigarettes a day pays more than $21 in taxes a year.

Fosters Bootlegging? The bill, he continued, would result in bootlegging cigarettes into the state from Illinois and Minnesota, which have no tax, and that chain stores could have large stocks mailed in from tax-free states.

Other objectors said the burden of administration would be laid on jobbers who received insufficient profit now to carry extra expense, and that owners of vending machines would be driven into bankruptcy because of renovations that would be necessary in coin slots in machines in current use.

Senator Paulson (P) LaCrosse, urged the committee to make an appropriation of approximately $750,000 annually to provide some seven to 10,000 aliens with old age pensions if his bill passed the legislature.

He also asked the committee to grant an appropriation of $250,000 for school transportation and extend service to students living outside a 1 1/2 mile radius from schools instead of the present two mile limit.

sacred college of cardinals' third ceremony of homage to the new pontiff.

His eminence gave his views on yesterday's papal election shortly before going to Vatican City for the sacred college of cardinals' third ceremony of homage to the new pontiff.

Cardinal O'Connell was wearing the scarlet robe prescribed for these rites.

"The holy father," he said, "is truly a beautiful character, a man of great intelligence and wide experience. He is humble and he is great. He possesses a great force and great restraint. He truly may be said to be a living saint. That is something of great importance in these troublesome times."

Choice Nearly Unanimous "I look forward to a remarkable pontificate—something like that of Leo XIII."

He indicated the pontiff's qualifications were so outstanding that he was almost a unanimous choice of the cardinals on the third ballot.

After referring to the almost unprecedented brevity of the conclave, his eminence observed that "this indicates the almost complete unanimity on the part of the sacred college. It is not possible to say more than that."

Cardinal related that when he advanced to the papal throne to pay his first act of homage to the new pontiff he asked a special blessing for the people of Boston and the entire United States.

"With all my heart I bless them and will always pray for them," the holy father replied, placing hands over the heart. "They all were so kind to me when I visited them."

LITTLE NAZI COMMENT Berlin—(P)—The Nazi press accepted mostly without comment the election of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli as pope and sources close to the German foreign office indicated today German policy for the present would be one of conciliation blended with a "wait-and-see" attitude.

While in days immediately following the death of Pope Pius XI some sections of the press spoke critically of the cardinal as opposed to nazism, today's morning papers confined themselves largely to details of the election.

The Lokal Anzeiger came the closest to clear editorial comment when it said, "there were supposed to be many among the cardinals who were for election of a pope who would devote himself exclusively to the saving of souls. Now the cardinal who has been elected."

The Morgenpost noted that the man who became Pope Pius XII "practically determined the policies of the Vatican under his predecessor."

22 Youths Appear At Bicycle Safety Bureau in February

Twenty-two bicyclists appeared at the police bicycle safety bureau last month for failing to observe rules of safe driving, according to a report of Sergeant Carl Radtke, who is in charge of the bureau. Eight suspensions of driving privileges were made.

Fifty-nine youths have appeared at the weekly school of the bureau since the first of the year with a total of 17 suspensions being made.

Violations last month included parking on sidewalk 5, riding more than one on a bicycle 1, failure to obey traffic signal 1, riding without lights 9, riding on sidewalk 8 and riding abreast 2.

Municipal League Requests Delay On Pension Bill

Wants Chance to Submit Own Measure to Legislature

Madison—(P)—Attorney H. O. Wolfe, Shorewood, representing the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, told a legislative committee yesterday the league objected to consideration of legislation to increase firemen's and policemen's pensions before it had an opportunity to submit its own bill.

Addressing the senate committee on state and local government, Wolfe said he thought it acted unfairly in reporting to the senate for passage a pension measure sponsored by the Wisconsin Policemen's Protective association, after the league had asked that all similar measures be considered together.

He said the bill introduced by Senator Gettleman (R), Milwaukee, at the request of the state association of firemen, many of whose members appeared to ask its passage.

Asserting no legislation should be enacted except upon a sound actuarial basis, Wolfe said:

Opposes Haste "The legislature has no business dealing with this matter in piecemeal fashion. We think we are within our rights in demanding that those who are driving us into bankruptcy because of renovations that would be necessary in coin slots in machines in current use."

Senator Paulson (P) LaCrosse, urged the committee to make an appropriation of approximately $750,000 annually to provide some seven to 10,000 aliens with old age pensions if his bill passed the legislature.

Letters on Pet Traffic Peeves To Appear in Paper Next Week

Letters citing pet traffic peeves of drivers of Appleton and vicinity appeared in the Post-Crescent office this morning, only one day after the newspaper invited motorists who are weary of erratic driving to describe their No. 1 annoyance.

A glance at the letters received this morning indicates that drivers have very definite convictions on what constitutes discourteous and dangerous deportment on the streets and highways. And they don't hesitate telling about them, clearly and forcibly, in their letters.

The Post-Crescent will start publishing the letters next week when more have accumulated. The paper will pay $1 for each letter of 400 words or less which it prints. The number of words—unless over the maximum—will not be considered most important in judging the letters. One paragraph of terse, pungent comment can do more than a page of loosely written remarks.

Here's a chance for drivers whose tempers have been tried and fenders scraped by road hogs and speed kings to accomplish two things: (1) Let off a little steam that has been worked up over these unpredictable people and (2) help the cause of traffic safety.

29 Examined at Health Clinic

Clintonville Woman's Club Sponsors Examinations at City Hall

Clintonville—Twenty-nine patients received free examinations at the health clinic sponsored Wednesday at the city hall by the Clintonville Woman's club. Dr. Mary Allen of Green Bay, assisted by Miss Estelle Jung, Waupaca county nurse, gave health examinations to 27 pre-school children, one adult, and one special case. Members of the Woman's club who assisted with the work were: Mrs. Donald Russell and Mrs. W. H. Schmidt in the forenoon, Mrs. E. A. Hutchinson and Mrs. J. B. Nims in the afternoon.

A class of 25 met Tuesday evening at the city hall to begin the study of home nursing under the direction of Mrs. Clement Bohr of this city, a registered nurse. The class is being sponsored by the Clintonville Chapter of the American Red Cross. Mrs. T. A. Landon, president of the local chapter for many years, traced the history of the American Red Cross from its origin in 1861. Subjects to be studied at future meetings of the class include: principles of personal hygiene; how to handle, bathe, dress and feed babies and small children; how to make an ill member of the family comfortable; how to give a bed bath and change bed linen; how to handle common ailments and emergencies; and how to aid in promotion and protection of community health.

Alfred Hoffmann of the Clintonville Meat company is confined to his home on E. Twelfth street with burns to his face, neck and hands. He suffered the burns recently when coal gas exploded while he was building a fire at the packing plant of the company.

First Lady Finds White House Not Prison She Had Predicted

BY BETH CAMPBELL Washington—(P)—In six busy years, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has proved the White House less of a prison than she herself predicted.

With a zestful, "I'd love to fly the Atlantic," she accepted an invitation to christen a huge trans-Atlantic plane this afternoon and perhaps take a flight in it—although not across the ocean.

Sunday, starting her seventh year as America's first lady, she will head southwest on her seventh paid lecture tour. She will add more miles to upwards of 200,000 traveled since March 4, 1933, and thus continue making a new pattern for president's wives.

Yet, six years ago, Mrs. Roosevelt arranged to curtail a good many of her activities preparatory to entering the White House. "I have realized all along," she said a month before her husband's inauguration, "that I shall have to give up a good many things March 4."

Cut Down Activities Among the activities which Mrs. Roosevelt arranged to give up were a teaching position at her Toddhunter school for girls, radio talks on a commercial hour, several writing "contracts," and much of her public speaking.

In the last year, Mrs. Roosevelt served hot dogs to Sweden's crown princess at a picnic, went picnicking with Shirley Temple, and wrote letters for her secretary during the latter's illness.

fied that the $2,000,000,000 treasury stabilization fund never had been used "to rig the market" for government securities. Furthermore, he declared, the treasury had "no agreement with any other country to stabilize their currencies."

The treasury head gave this testimony at a hearing on legislation to continue the stabilization fund and the administration's power to alter the gold content of the dollar from next June 30 to Jan. 15, 1941.

On another subject, which some legislators and business men contend bears on business confidence, the majority of the special house committee on executive reorganization declared that its proposed grant of power to President Roosevelt to revamp the government "creates absolutely no new agencies."

Minority members of the committee said the sole purpose of the measure, approved by the committee yesterday in two hours, was the creation, by transfer of functions, of two huge federal agencies to handle public works and public welfare.

Miss Welty's dramatic training included work at the Cincinnati College of Music, the Frances Robinson Duff school in New York and summer work with Max Reinhardt at his workshop in California.

"Catherine, the Magnificent Medici," "Isabella Regina, Queen of Spain," "Woodman and Queen, Elizabeth Bonaparte," "La Belle Bonaparte," "The Empress Josephine," "Catherine, the Great Czarina" and "The Tragedy of Mary Stuart" are sketches included in her repertoire.

Rehabilitation School Program May be Stopped

Budget Slash Would End Vocational Branch, Hambrecht Says

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau) Madison—Local participation in the state's vocational rehabilitation program in the city of Appleton and other communities will have to be discontinued if a recommended cut of 20 per cent in the state rehabilitation division's budget is allowed to stand, George P. Hambrecht, director of the state department of vocational education, warned today in a statement filed with the legislative joint finance committee.

During the last 12 years, the department chief explained, the rehabilitation division of the state department of vocational education has built up a cooperative program in 20 localities, including Appleton.

"The curtailment which will be necessary because of a reduction of the state appropriation of the amount of $15,000 or 20 per cent of the local participation plan with most of these communities will need to be discontinued," he said.

Under the present program, one half of the cost of the local participation is paid by the locality, while the remainder is divided between the state and federal government.

The result of such local cooperation, Hambrecht declared, "has been almost immediate contact with urgent cases, closer supervision of those in training and maintenance of the morale of the disabled by more immediate attention to their needs. Such a plan would not be possible with a centralized staff alone because of prohibitive travel expense."

Hambrecht reported that 18,000 persons in Wisconsin become disabled each year through industrial, home, automobile and other accidents, and on account of diseases. Twenty per cent of those cases require rehabilitative assistance, while the other 80 per cent make their own vocational adjustment.

Cuts in Hambrecht's budget for vocational education proper also presaged a fight, and much protest from vocational schoolmen, today.

$225,000 Annually The department for a number of years has received $225,000 annually for state aids to local vocational schools, a sum which has repeatedly been shown to be less than the law intends the local schools to receive, and which the cities maintain the state promises them. Due to steadily increasing enrollments in the local institutions, last year the state aid was promoted to the amount of about 64 per cent of the amount claimed. This year it is likely that the prorating will be even more severe.

Moreover, the Hill budget proposes to drop a $45,000 annual appropriation for vocational education in agriculture, and in scholarships to needy students in vocational schools.

The state vocational education department today had released figures showing the tremendous increase in the numbers of the vocational group of Wisconsin citizens who are enjoying the facilities of the vocational schools.

There were only 50,186 students twenty years ago, in the 1919-20 school year, and 69,472 in 1925. By 1930 the number had grown to 87,528. In 1935 there were more than 100,000 for the first time, a total of 102,273, while in the last school year there were 109,907, in 44 schools.

Twenty-seven of the institutions provided both evening and day classes, it was reported.

During the last year they claimed, under the state aid law, a total of $397,580 in aids from the state, but were allowed only $255,000.

Harrison Strikes Note of Warning On Easy Spending Appeals for United Effort Of Parties for New Fiscal Policy

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—Almost six years to a day since the Democratic party took over the legislative and executive branches of the government, a new type of leadership has arisen from its own ranks—a leadership on behalf of curtailed spending.

Coming as it does from the man who two years ago was defeated by one vote for the titular leadership of the United States senate, the formal statement by Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee, strikes a note of warning as well as appeal for a united effort of all parties in congress to map out a new fiscal policy.

What the Mississippi senator said fit to say publicly at this time, just as the president is returning to Washington from a brief vacation, will not popularize him with those members of his own party who have been in favor of unlimited spending, but, on the other hand, it is exactly what was revealed in the last congressional elections as the unmistakable demand of the American people.

The administration may well agree with Senator Harrison—spending is not a policy which has unqualified support. But this is a far cry from finding a substitute in order that the economic system may function without a serious deflation. For, every time there has been any serious cutting of appropriations or withdrawal of government spending, there has been a deflationary cycle which has added to rather than subtracted from the ranks of the unemployed. The senate finance committee chairman realizes this when he says:

Fiscal Situation
"I appreciate the difficulty of the task, but if everyone connected with the operation of government, whether in the executive or legislative departments, will realize the serious fiscal situation confronting us, and counsel together and cooperate in mapping out a plan, and unflinchingly and without political consideration work toward that end, we can accomplish results that will bring hope and encouragement to our people and financial stability to our government."

This is plainly an appeal for the submerging of party differences, a call for a last effort to save the Democratic party from defeat in the 1940 elections. It is an appeal which has the solid backing of the independent Democrats in the senate, including Vice President Garner. It is timed to coincide with the measures of appeasement which lately have been disclosed by Secretary Hopkins of the department of commerce and Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury department.

The specific issue raised—whether to pass a law raising the limit of debt beyond $45,000,000,000—is not in itself of consequence except as a symbol of economic policy. The present debt limit will hardly be reached till July, 1940, and any refusal to raise that limit now would work no hardships, because, by the congressional session of January, 1940, it will be time enough to determine to what extent the debt limit shall be increased. For the moment, it may have a soothing effect on business to have congress refuse to increase the debt limit.

Favors Expenditures
But such a gesture by itself would be transparent. Unfortunately, it is easier to talk economy than it is to practice it. And, so far as congress is concerned, it already has been going on record in favor of expenditures that could be curtailed. Take the Gilbertsville dam. Last year, $5,000,000 was spent and now, because that sum was advanced, it is planned to go on till $100,000,000 is spent for a power project which can have the effect of throttling the expansion of and the financing of the private utility business.

The hypercritics of congress are usually most numerous in the field of spending. Each member has his pet project. And, when appropriation bills are presented for passage, they usually have been log-rolled into final form by mutually assisting interests, so that it is difficult to vote out any item specifically.

To get the record straight, it is important to recall that Secretary Morgenthau gave congress an economy program in the autumn of 1937, but, within a few weeks thereafter, it was rejected by congress and a resumption of "deficit financing" was announced.

Stop-Gap
Today, the policy of spending to maintain purchasing power is entrenched as a stop-gap, but not as a permanent program. The administration would gladly cut the budget and eliminate the emergency expenditures if someone could guarantee that private industry and business would immediately reemploy those released from WPA and similar relief works. It's the transition period, with its risks of serious deflation, that the administration fears, and, until a substitute for public spending arrives, it is doubtful whether much economy will be practiced.

SHERIFF EVOLVED INTO LINCOLN

Congress is mainly at fault. It has refused to provide an intermediate credit system to provide capital loans for American business, and it has refused to listen to common-sense pleas for a readjustment of the tax burden so as to provide incentives for business. There never was any better way of increasing the national income and providing employment than to remove the impediments to a free flow of capital. These are by no means entirely in the legislative area, but many of them are, and if Senator Pat Harrison, who wants spending curtailed and who presides over the all-important senate finance committee, will work with equal fervor for a removal of the impediments in tax laws, in banking laws, in securities laws, in labor laws to the flow of capital and the exchange of goods in America's huge domestic market, then the gesture of today will become the achievements of tomorrow. Otherwise, the talk of economy and curtailed spending will be merely another one of the series of platitudes of which congressmen on both sides of the political aisle have of late become aggressive spokesmen. Canal Company Is After Monopoly, Clifford Charges

Green Bay Lawyer Files Brief in Kaukauna Power Dam Fight

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The Green Bay and Mississippi Canal company is striving to get complete "control" of the electric output of the Fox River Valley," Gerald Clifford of Green Bay, attorney for the Citizens' Protective League of Kaukauna declared today in a brief filed with the Wisconsin public service commission for his client.

Clifford filed his formal argument in the rehearing granted by the state commission on petition of the League in the controversy resulting from the city's contract with the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal company. The company traded certain rights and lands with the city for the construction of a municipal power dam on the Fox River, with the proviso that the city would continue to pay lease rentals on the company's power generating equipment and plants in the city at the 1938 rate and on 1938 quantities for another 25 years.

The result, according to critics of the city's action, gives the private utility a virtual monopoly on electricity production in the city of Kaukauna for a quarter of a century, and prevents the expansion of the municipal electric system there.

Clifford told the commission in his written argument that the Fox River is the only "great water power" in this population that is really the center of the state, and quoted from proceedings of a board of directors meeting to show that the Green Bay and Mississippi company seeks to control the valley's electrical energy resources. That policy, he continued, is revealed in the city's contract with the company now under dispute.

He declared that when a company "undertakes the control of the white coal of the Fox River valley," under an agreement that "directly limits output," it should be "severely scrutinized."

Other points made by Clifford included an argument that when the city revised its original plans for power dam construction, and decided to build the structure farther down the river, a public notice should have been given, and a public hearing held, before the public service commission amended its order of approval. Since that was not given, he held, the amended order is not binding.

He also reintroduced an argument made orally by Kaukauna's city attorney, Harry McAndrews, that a popular referendum is required to be held in the city before the construction of the power dam. McAndrews made this point before the commission's hearing recently, and disagreed with the majority of the city council and the utility commission on several other points in the utility fight which has divided the Fox River city into two hostile camps.

"Unreasonable Burden"

Clifford also said that it was the duty of the state commission to determine that the city government had proceeded properly in starting the projected million dollar utility improvement before issuing its approval.

He said that the contract with the utility company "imposes an unreasonable burden on the taxpayers" by taking away valuable property and giving them questionable rights in land in return, and obligating them to erect a dam which they will not use to its full capacity for 25 years.

Elaborating on his charge that the canal company seeks a Fox River Valley power monopoly, he also said that the contract which it now holds could be assigned to other, foreign power interests.

A brief by Joseph LeFevre, counsel for the Kaukauna utility commission, is expected to be filed with the commission this week.

Republicans are Looking for New Democratic Whipping Boy

Washington—Republicans, who lost a whipping boy when Harry Hopkins was taken out of WPA and made secretary of commerce, are trying to find a new one. They have picked on Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau but without much luck thus far.

For instance, when Republicans undertook to nag him about the secret $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, Morgenthau simply opened his books and allowed the Republicans to take a look for themselves. They were disappointed, finding everything in perfect order with a $10,000,000 profit to boot. That was the way Morgenthau answered rumors such as that he had used stabilization fund cash to finance the recent French plane deal. He appeared voluntarily before a house committee, insisted that newspaper reporters be present, and laid his cards on the table, ending the whole brood of rumors.

Raymond Clapper

Now Republicans are preparing to go after Morgenthau because he wants congress to hoist by $5,000,000,000 the legal limit on the public debt, which by law cannot now go beyond $45,000,000,000. This proposition is made necessary by technical requirements but the Republicans see it as a simple vehicle through which they can dramatize the attack on Roosevelt spending which is to be one of the chief topics in the next political campaign. House Republican Leader Martin has appointed a special committee to assemble the ammunition for this fight.

Martin is canny, as usual, in spotting this debt-limit proposition as a practical vehicle made to order for Republican purposes. You can talk about spending by quoting budget figures but such detail stuff leaves the customers cold. People don't like figures. Tricky and hard to understand. But when you lay it out that the administration wants to raise the public debt limit to $50,000,000,000 you can make the milkman in Omaha wild.

"General" Economy Is Easier To Handle

And then it is so much easier politically for a senator or representative to lift his hands in holy horror over such a generalized proposition as this than it is for him to stand up and vote against old age pensions, for instance, particularly if he has flirted with the Townsendites as so many Republicans have. It is easier to be for economy in principle than for economy in particular. You can be against extravagance and big debt but when you cut appropriations for the agriculture department you catch hell from home. So the Republicans are preparing to turn on their righteous indignation full blast, against raising the debt limit.

They'll find much support among the Democrats. But in the end the debt limit will be raised because it's a practical necessity. If congress doesn't do this, it is not in time to force the treasury into issuing printing-press money, as Secretary

Morgenthau will show when the Republicans try to squeeze him. Morgenthau doesn't fix the expenses. Congress appropriates and he has to find the money. If revenues are insufficient, he issues notes or long-term bonds. We will soon be close to the limit of the authorized $45,000,000,000 particularly with respect to long-term bonds on which the limit is $30,000,000. Bonds and notes in excess would be invalid.

When the limit is reached, then the treasury, to meet payments ordered by various appropriation bills would turn first to issuing silver certificates. It can issue $1,350,000,000 in silver certificates against silver now held. When that is exhausted, then comes the $2,000,000,000 authorized for greenbacks, voted by congress in 1933 when the Thomas inflation amendment was attached to the first AAA bill.

Actually it will never come to that because congress, after taking the administration for a political ride, will give it the added debt authority. Morgenthau's testimony will put the case so that refusal would be out of the question.

One of Morgenthau's predecessors, Andrew Mellon, also was used as a political football in congress. Vice-President Garner, now sainted by the conservatives, was considered

Stacymen Rally To Beat Manawa By Narrow Margin

Invaders Outclass New London Squad for 1st Three Quarters

New London—An aggressive Manawa High school cage team nearly upset the New London Stacymen until the latter were jolted into action for a fourth quarter rally to win a non-conference game at the Washington High school gym last night by the precarious margin of 25 to 21.

The invaders outgassed and outclassed the Red and White completely for three quarters. Not until three minutes of the end of the game did New London manage to take the lead by 20 to 18 after trailing 14 to 18 at the opening of the period. They worked to a tie score in each quarter but got no farther.

Coach D. N. Stacy yanked his starting five from the floor in the second quarter when they trailed 6 to 4 and replaced them with five new men. They did worse and left the score at 6 to 9 in favor of Manawa at the half. The first five, Hoier, Ross, Wally Hammerberg, Pies and Poppy, took over again in the second half and except for occasional single substitutions managed to pull the game out of the fire in the closing minutes. Coach Roy Bloomquist used only two extra men for the Wolves but alternated forward and backcourt assignments.

Wolves Take Lead
The Wolves scored four points on free throws before the locals could tally. The Stacymen were hard pressed and if the ball wasn't taken away from them they threw it away or missed easy shots. Despite the fighting defense and aggressive offense of the Wolves, all their buckets were tallied from a distance while the Bulldogs scored from close in.

Ken Brault was the first substitute for Ross, New London forward, after three minutes of play and he tossed the first throw that started New London's rallies. Doug Hoier shook off the Wolves to hoop four buckets in the last half while Nolan was the scoring threat for Manawa and collected a third of the points.

B SQUAD SWAMPED

The New London B squad was caught napping and took a 7 to 15 drubbing from the Manawa second string in the preliminary game last night. The score at the end of the first quarter was tied at 2-all and the New London fledglings led 7 to 5 at the half but here their scoring stopped. Coach Bloomquist's youngsters swarmed over the local lads to hold them helpless throughout the second half while they romped ahead with four more buckets.

THE RECENT CRISIS

A few words may be in order as to the recent ideological flurry in this country. For there has been such a flurry, and while it was at its height the American press got unusually excited about the menace of "alien systems." Why so?

Well, we Americans appreciate the right of other nations to live their lives in their own way, and usually we ignore their political systems. But we rear up when they try to dominate other nations' lives, including ours. And especially when in doing so they practice such cruelties as Hitler has enforced against helpless Jews, and also against tens of thousands of so-called Aryan citizens.

Americans don't stand for concentration camps, private executions, denial of open court trials, one-party and one-man government, confiscation of property, or the use of governmental power for domestic and foreign blackmail. That is what Hitler and Stalin and Mussolini seem to stand for, although there is pretty good reason for believing that none of them really represents his people, and that a free vote would show a majority against them.

Some of the American press, perhaps, has been over-zealous lately in denouncing these things. But there was reason for emphasis. During the winter an international crisis seemed to be developing, with danger of an imminent war, started by dictators to hold up Europe at the point of a gun and grab what they wanted. Fair-minded Americans agree that Germany and Italy both have grievances, but that is not the way to correct them.

Such a war might easily have dragged America in. So the American press, along with the American government, started jumping onto the dictators so hard that it seems to have scared them, at least temporarily, into a mood of common sense.

PENSIONS FOR EVERYBODY

It is astonishing how pension schemes of all kinds have been sweeping through the country lately. Especially old age pensions. Most of them seem to originate in states which, like California, and Florida, have an abnormally large ratio of elderly people. There is a great demand, too, for new social security pensions.

These are natural tendencies, perhaps, in a period characterized by so much insecurity as we have had in America during the last decade. But a great deal of the push behind these schemes comes from another complicating factor—a belief that in some magical way the payment of huge sums from public treasuries to great numbers of people will in itself create wealth and leave everybody better off than before. This is the special appeal of the familiar Townsend plan. And if the principle would work with respect to that plan, credulous people say—assuming that it would work—then why not for any kind of pension?

It is hard to convince millions of citizens that all this is, for our society in general, like a fellow trying to lift himself by his bootstraps, and that such finance would soon bankrupt any state or nation.

It may help somewhat, though, if a plan said to be contemplated at Washington goes through. The idea is to bring the Townsend plan to a vote in order to show the advocates that it cannot be adopted. This, however, is a ticklish business, because so many senators and representatives declared for the plan in the last election. Most of them will feel very awkward if they don't vote for it—also if they do.

DEMOCRACY'S BALANCE

In an address before 400 Princeton alumni, Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of the university, gave expression to a particularly penetrating analysis of the situation confronting the world.

"The 19th century," he said, "assumed that greatest happiness accrued from self-interest alone, and forgot that human beings also possess a set of social instincts which call for satisfaction through doing things together in organized activity. Today, the 20th century shows tendencies toward the opposite extreme which would force all life into organized and regimented channels.

"The problem is to achieve a balance between these two extremes, to attain that good life in which both our individual and social instincts are satisfied, to gear our social and economic existence to these deeply ingrained biological instincts."

It is the good fortune of America to be founded upon precisely such a balanced conception of nationhood. This country's traditional philosophy calls for individualistic freedom, subject only to those controls that are essential to maintenance of the common welfare.

The reason why Communism, Fascism and the other ideologies of regimentation are resented here is that they run counter to the principle of creative individualism in an ordered society.

The American people will do well to preserve this balance and resist any and every attempt to substitute centralized dictation for personal liberty under the law. If democracy is to remain as a guarantor of freedom it will be as a result of popular opposition to those who regard the citizen as a mere cog in the machinery of ruthless statcraft.

American movies are made intelligible to Japanese audiences by writing the dialogue in Japanese characters on the side of the film.

DALE HARRISON'S
In Old New York

En Route West—(Diary of a man who followed Horace Greeley's advice):

A day with the Indians: By motorbus from Santa Fe it is about two hours to the pueblo of the Santa Clara Indians—may their tribe increase, and so it is.

If New Yorkers think they are smart, they should study these redskins. Wrapped in their blankets, they formed a circle in the windswept clearing where our buses stopped; but when some of us unsling our cameras to take pictures, the chief raised his hand to forbid it.

The Indians have no objection to being photographed, he explained. The catch is that you can't photograph them free of charge. The standard rate is 10 cents per Indian. There were about 40 of them in the circle, and the chief said he would not let pictures be taken of the group because that would be too many Indians on one film, and he thought 50 cents would be about right for each picture of that many.

I told him I had seen pictures of Indians on pennies all my life, and that I would give him one of those copper pictures in exchange for one of him, but he was stubborn, so I didn't take any pictures.

The chief had his braves do a Buffalo dance. Right in the middle of it he saw one of us taking aim with a camera, so he stopped beating the drum and walked over to get his money. Indians certainly have learned something from the white man.

I went into the home of Saída, an Indian housewife. It was spotlessly clean. A small stove supplied heat. Beside it, saying no word, was an old woman, Saída's mother. On her feet were buckskin shoes, warm and neat. Saída said her mother had been wearing them more than 30 years, having new soles attached many times but never wearing out the shoe itself.

Saída displayed with great pride her own buckskin shoes. "My husband got out and kill big deer," she said. "My husband fix the skin himself, and my husband make the shoes. They never wear out, and they very nice shoes."

Time after time during our 15-minute chat she referred proudly, almost reverently, to "my husband." There could be no doubt of the Indian wife's love and loyalty and pride in her man. (Ladies, please note.)

On the wall were pictures of religious subjects—pictures and statues of the Christ and the Blessed Virgin. The Santa Clara Indians were Christianized long ago by Spanish missionaries, yet they never have foresworn their own gods or tribal ceremonies. In the village is a building in which white men are not permitted. There, at certain times of the year, the Indians hold their tribal religious ceremonies.

The Santa Claras are makers of pottery. Saída "signs" the pottery she makes, just as an artist signs a picture, she is that proud of her work. She showed me how she worked, and it was a demonstration of Indian patience and thoroughness. For one of the small ash trays or vases which sell for 10 or 25 cents, hours of labor are required. The polishing is done by a small stone taken from the river bed. These stones are choice possessions, handed down from generation to generation. The stone Saída uses belonged to her great great grandmother.

The tribe, she told me proudly, is increasing. "Each family has five, six, seven children," she said, "but mostly five. We are 450 people here. We live together all very happy. That is what life means to us—being happy. All Santa Clara Indians work together so that all will be happy."

I asked about the health of the colony. "Nobody get sick," she said. "Maybe sometimes we get headache." She pointed to a small rubber plant growing in a pot on a table. "When we get headache we take a leaf from plant. Me make medicine. Headache go away. Very good medicine we make."

These Indians were probably the first Americans to have equal suffrage. It is a custom dating far back. Each year the village elects its own governor—they all them governors rather than chiefs; and the women have as much to say about it as the braves.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

GRANDMOTHER'S CHAIR

Grandmother's chair is all done over.

In its accustomed place.

Strangely new, with its flowered cover,

It takes on added grace.

Just like a shrine where a healing spirit

Waits in a niche of blue.

Grandmother's chair is! We, when near it,

Envisage her, kindly, true.

Sitting there in a quaint old-fashioned

Costume of gleaming black.

She was never a soul impassioned.

Of strength she had no lack.

But she was gentle, and quiet-spoken,

Dreaming in her old chair.

Sometimes I listen, the silence broken,

And fancy her seated there.

A bit of fancy-work in her fingers,

Her faded gaze on mine . . .

How the memory of her fingers,

To make her chair a shrine!

A Bystander
In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—It would be hard to find a time when there was more evidence of bewilderment over the agricultural problem than just now.

Even from the Department of Agriculture, which has pursued its crop control and soil conservation program unfalteringly, there come random intimations that confidence in the success of the effort is wavering. Three months ago the department was discussing with some enthusiasm a two-price system. The aim was to arrange for lower-income groups to buy their supplies for less and so attaining the utopian goal of feeding, clothing and sheltering everybody well, regardless of their income.

The plan boomeranged. The idea of a two-price system was especially alarming to merchants, who saw themselves competing with low-price Government stores or something akin to them. The department hushed official discussion of it. Studies now are being pursued on a plan to permit low cost delivery to lower-income groups without appearing to be exactly a two-price system. That plan is still in the hands of departmental committees.

Committees Stumped
Agriculture committees in House and Senate are baffled. A special Senate committee is conducting spasmodic hearings on the cost-of-production proposal which originated among mid-west farmers' associations. Probably there is more support back of this plan than any one other before Congress, but there is still far less than enough support to insure passage.

Most appalling to both sides are figures recently compiled by the Farm Security Administration. These figures show that the government now has on hand $750,000,000 worth of goods, mostly cotton, which it has accepted as security for farm loans. The Hoover farm board, looked upon by this administration as an hysterical effort, had only $466,000,000 outstanding in such loans at its peak.

Of its outstanding loans, the department has $560,000,000 tied up in 11,200,000 bales of cotton. These government holdings represent virtually a full year's crop.

A major trouble with the system has been that it has pegged the price for world cotton, allowing foreign production to develop to an extent that U. S. exports have dropped 45 per cent below old time normals. Recently the United States has been seeking an international marketing agreement for wheat and cotton, with little success. Now there is serious talk of boldly entering a dumping war unless an international agreement can be reached.

That might knock the price down as low as five cents a pound, representing a loss of three to seven cents a pound on Government holdings, as loans range from 8 to 12 cents.

Has Suggestion
The latest cotton-wheat remedy, advanced by Senator Lee of Oklahoma, who has refined last year's McAdoo bill to win some support in Congress. His proposal is a domestic allotment scheme under which each farmer would be given a quota of the country's actual need. For this part of his crop he would get $125 a bushel for wheat and 20 cents a pound for cotton. For anything he produced above this quota he would get only the world price.

Lee contends this would discourage farmers from growing excessive crops of cotton and wheat and at the same time take from the government the surplus. Both the domestic price-fixing and foreign dumping features of the proposal have brought criticism here but for lack of other "newer-and-better" plans it is getting attention.

Best bet at present is that Congress, for lack of agreement on any new plan, will simply crutch up the present farm legislation and pray for prosperity.

In the bitter fight on the White-Catlin bill outlawing "stranger picketing," which labor opposes with all the vigor at its command, Biemiller talked for more than an hour, discoursing on everything from the industrial revolution in England, to the theories of labor legislation as expounded in recent court decisions all over the country. Labor law has become a field for specialization by lawyers. Apparently the lawyer-leaders in the Wisconsin assembly have not chosen that field for their specialty.

SENATOR ROETHE
To many moderate conservatives, Edward F. Roethe of Fenimore is the ideal state senator. He is well-informed, dispassionate, fair, friendly, capable, and experienced. He takes a deep interest in his work, is regarded as expert in some fields of legislation, among them education.

Which makes it unusual, and worthy of record, that Roethe is now the subject of much wonderment, and considerable criticism, for an important educational proposal which he is sponsoring in the legislature.

Because Phil LaFollette packed the University of Wisconsin board of regents with Progressive party henchmen, and succeeded in carrying out his will in the Glenn Frank ouster, Roethe wants to mend the situation by abolishing the present board of regents, and substituting one chosen personally by Governor Meil.

The obvious comment of almost anyone is that it is bad taste, poor policy, or that broad sn, "politics," for a Progressive to pack the governing board of the state's biggest school, it is at least as bad, for a Republican to do so. It is all the more surprising, Roethe's admirers feel, because the Grant county senator for years has been proposing a fundamental rejuvenation of state educational administration by means of the creation of a single state board of education for all schools and educational activities. Although he is the original author of the state board idea, Roethe now

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warm cloth. VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors. This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-pas-ways—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

New Law Permits Time Extension On Tax Payments

Municipalities May Give Until July 1 on Affidavit Plan

Authority to extend the time for payment of 1938 real estate taxes without penalty until July 1 is given the governing bodies of cities, villages and towns in the state through a law that has been passed by the state legislature, according to John E. Hentschel, Outagamie county clerk. A copy of the law has been received by the clerk and it is similar to one in effect two years ago.

Taxpayers desiring to take advantage of any such extension must file an affidavit in duplicate showing need with the treasurer to establish their right to such extension. A supply of affidavits is available to town, village and city officials at the office of Miss Marie Ziegenhagen, county treasurer. Because authority to extend time for payment of taxes was not made by the legislature last year a number of cities adopted a deferred payment plan under which taxpayers could pay half their taxes in March and the remaining half in July at a flat interest rate of 1 per cent. Some other cities used a 60-40 per cent deferred payment plan.

No Penalty
The law provides that treasurers "shall by entering in red on the tax roll opposite the name of such party extend the time for the payment of such taxes without penalty up to and including July 1." "All such taxes not paid by March 22, when local treasurers are required to settle with the county treasurer, shall be returned delinquent together with the original individual affidavits. Taxpayers may pay such taxes without penalty, interest or other charges at any time before or on July 1."

gressively quoted a leading industrialist as saying there were frills at the university and asked my comment.

"I went down the list asking: 'Is this a frill, gentlemen?' for each of the special services. When I came to the chairs of Gaelic and Polish, I asked the same question and then added: 'If these are frills, they must be legislative frills,' meaning it was up to the legislature to decide their value since it created them."

Arthur L. Zimny and Anthony P. Gawronski, Milwaukee Democrats, accused the university of giving Governor Heil "false information."

Philip E. Nelson (P) Maple, claimed the governor himself ridiculed the departments in a recent speech before the Kenosha Chamber of Commerce. Nelson in turn was accused by Bolens of "trying to give a false impression."

Bolens, explaining the governor had quoted Dykstra, called Heil "the best led-to man in the state."

Nelson questioned whether the way was being paved for the return of Dr. Glenn Frank to the presidency of the university.

"Is this Glenn Frank's ghost stalking around the legislature?"

Snow or Rain Is Coming Saturday

Mercury Climbs Above Freezing Point Again Today

Snow or rain tomorrow is the prediction of the weatherman for Appleton and vicinity.

The thermometer was at a 24-hour low at 7 o'clock this morning when it registered 20 degrees above zero. At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon it was 35 above, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company.

At noon today the mercury had climbed to 40 degrees above zero as recorded on the thermometer atop the Post-Crescent roof. Streets were filled with miniature lakes and puddles as the snowbanks dwindled under the rising temperatures.

The forecast for Wisconsin in general was unsettled with snow in the north and rain in the south on Saturday with somewhat colder temperatures in the extreme northwest sections of the state.

Lowest temperature for the last 24-hour period was at Devils Lake, N. D. where the mercury dropped to four degrees above zero.

West Asleep At Switch in Today's Hand

BY ELY CULBERTSON
It is one thing to defend a hand against a stolid, unimaginative declarer who runs all his ready-made tricks and then hopelessly surrenders himself to the mercy of his opponents. It is quite another to defend against the type of player who overlooks no bet, either psychological or technical, and always is on the alert to steal something that cannot be made by legitimate means. In today's hand West was asleep at the switch.

The bidding:
East South West North
2 spades Pass 3 no trump Pass
Pass Pass

This bidding had several points of interest. East, it will be noted, used the new Culbertson three-bid based on an almost solid suit, with the minimum number of winners, namely six. South, of course, had to pass on the first round. His hand was not nearly strong enough for an overcall or double. West acted properly in passing. The responder should have at least one and one-half honor tricks in two suits to respond with three no trump to an opening three-bid, and needs greater strength for a suit response. North took the shrewd and proper course of doubling. Such a double (of an opening three-bid) is of an optional nature, that is, partner can pass if he has a worthless hand or one that he feels is better on defense, or can take out to a suit with about one and one-half honor tricks and a five card suit. In short, the partner can exercise his own judgment after this optional double. In this case, South felt that since he was vulnerable against nonvulnerable opponents, and since he had a spade stopper and scattered strength in the other three suits, that there would be an excellent play for game at no trump. Though he was wrong in this judgment, I do not think that he should be criticized. For example, North might have had one more club or one more heart, and nine tricks might then have been a laydown.

As it was, the contract had to be stolen. West opened the spade seven and East made the eminently correct play of the ten spot. East had no sign of an outside entry and his one hope of running the spade suit was to leave a spade in West's hand so that if West could stop one or more suits, he could cut East on lead with that spade. Declarer won and made a lightning count of tricks. He saw that he had four clubs, three hearts, and one spade, and that he would need a diamond trick to make out the contract. One thing was certain. If he were to cash his four clubs and three hearts, he never would be able to steal a diamond trick because, by that time, the defenders would be on the alert—they would have counted eight tricks for the declarer. The one chance to grab a diamond trick was to do it quickly, by thus risking a severe penalty. Declarer at the second trick, led a low diamond toward dummy's queen. West, as mentioned above, was fast asleep. Holding A J 9 of diamonds, he was so intent on establishing a tenace position for himself that would produce two diamond tricks, that he failed to see what might happen. Surely it was not far-fetched to assume that if the diamond queen held, declarer might rattle off three hearts and four clubs, which, in addition to the spade trick already home, would round out the contract. At any rate, when West played the diamond nine it was all over. Dummy's queen held and declarer shifted quickly to his sure winners in hearts and clubs.

Obviously, if West had been even reasonably alert, he would have put up the diamond ace without a second's hesitation and would have led another spade. East then would have run off six spade tricks and the contract, instead of being fulfilled, would have been defeated 300 points.

Beauty and You

—by PATRICIA LINDSAY—

CAROL LOMBARD plays the part of a new mother in her latest picture, "Made for Each Other."

Once you are the thrilled parent of a new infant, you are more than likely to require special attention in several ways.

Your skin is not as lovely as before the offspring was thought about, your teeth and nails seem to be causing you no end of trouble, and your hair lacks the sheen it should boast of and is probably falling out.

You could tolerate all these annoyances but what truly annoys you, is your clumsiness! You can't get around as sprightly as before, and whenever you look at your wardrobe you yearn to buy an entirely fresh one!

Take It Easy
According to the best advice of physicians—you must, first of all, take it easy. Spend three weeks in bed and then wait three months before you go in for an active life, or strenuous exercise. Only the famous "knee-chest" exercise is permitted, and you may begin that the first of the second week while you are still in bed. That does wonders to strengthen your abdominal muscles and to put you back in shape. When you do get up buy yourself a nicely fitting undergarment which gives you proper support. Such a garment must be fitted to you in the store for seldom can you buy one which does not need some alteration.

Your Beauty Routine
With the new baby to care for, you will not have too many hours to spend on beautifying yourself. But there are a few things which you should do directly after getting up from bed.

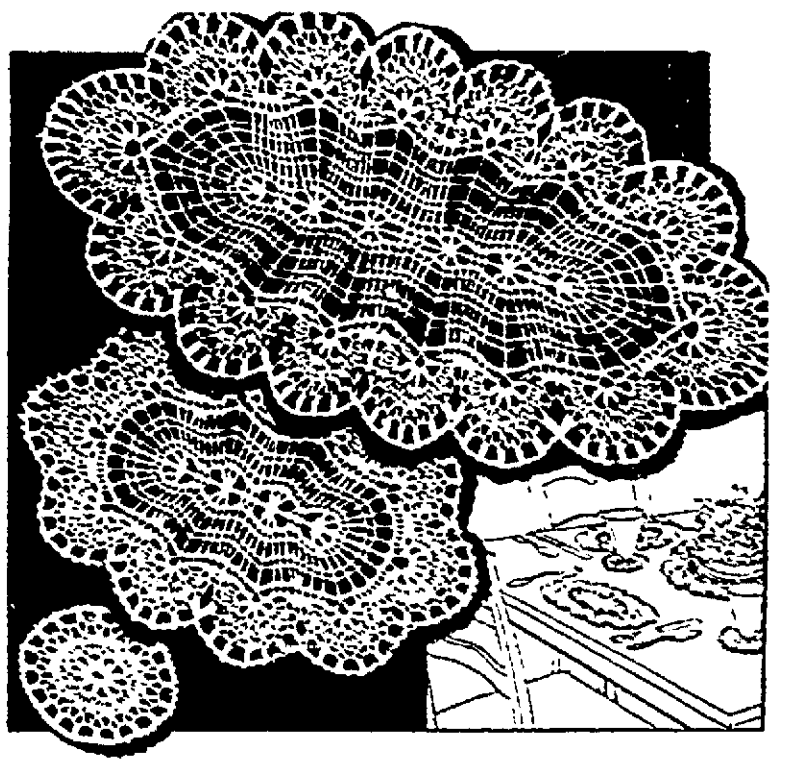

Eat of menu the doctor prescribes which should be sufficient in proper vitamins to nourish your teeth, hair and skin. Plenty of milk and phosphate, fresh vegetables, fresh and cooked fruits, lean meats and natural sweets (not candy!).

Each day you must cream your face well for a cleansing, refresh it with a mild skin tonic and lubricate it if it is dry. Once a week you should either get a thorough reconditioning facial or give yourself one.

Send for my leaflet on "Reconditioning Tired and Neglected Hair," or buy yourself a course of treatments at one of the leading, reliable hair salons. If you have a special hair problem, write me about it, and I shall try to help you.

When it is time to exercise, begin with swimming movements—or begin with actually swimming.

Husbands Philander Because It's the Way They're Made

DOROTHY DIX business, and she has a very congenial personality and is nice to get along with, but all the same he is a stepper-out.

BY DOROTHY DIX
Are wives responsible for their husbands' philandering? A man thinks that they are. He says: "Every married woman wants to keep her husband not only lawfully, but companionably; yet, nevertheless, nine times out of ten, when a married man wanders away from his own fireside it is his wife's fault."

"I have a friend, for instance, a fine chap who has been married several years and has one child of whom he is extremely fond, yet he has been unfaithful to his wife virtually ever since he was married and has spent the money on outsiders that is needed in his home. He admits that his wife is very good to him and stuck with him when he was financially down. But he doesn't get the companionship at home that he so desires, so he hunts for it outside."

"I know of another case where a young man married and has two lovely children and thinks the world of his wife and kids. His wife works right alongside of him in business, and she has a very congenial personality and is nice to get along with, but all the same he is a stepper-out."

"Why does he do it? Because something is lacking at home. Something he wants that his wife doesn't give him. And it is up to every married woman to find out what this intangible something is and supply it, for that is the only way they can stop their husbands from philandering. Men really are domestic animals and would much rather spend their evenings at their own firesides if their wives would make home as entertaining and peppy as night clubs are."

Being a woman; and hence wise to the faults and frailties of our sex, I am willing to admit that there are wives who drive their husbands away from home and to the "other woman" by their nagging and complaining and fault-finding; by their being so slouchy that no man can bear to look at them, and by their being so dull and stupid that their husbands have to flee for their lives to keep from being bored to death.

But the virago, the wet-blanket, the sloven and the Dumb Dora are comparatively rare specimens of wifehood. They not only do not account for the large number of unfaithful husbands, but, curiously enough, they have also no monopoly on the philanderers.

The model wife is just as likely to get a husband with a wandering foot as is her sister who is an example of everything a wife should not be. All of us know women who are pretty and sweet, amiable, intelligent and crackjack housekeepers whose husbands break their hearts with their affairs. We wonder why these husbands are not content with the blessings God has given them. But they are not. And perhaps they don't know why themselves.

So the answer to the question of why husbands philander is that that is the way they were made. The call of the wild is in their blood, ever as long as they live in captivity are they thoroughly domesticated and house-broken. No woman, no matter how beautiful and talented, brilliant and diplomatic she may be, can hold one of these male butterflies.

He will always slit from woman to woman, tiring of each as soon as her novelty has worn off, forever on the quest for something new. He has no depth of feeling, no loyalty, no sense of responsibility, nothing of what we call character and principle. He is as faithless to his mistresses as he is to his wife. His only interest in love is in playing the game.

To say that such men are driven to philandering by their wives is untrue and absurd. They are driven to it by their own unstable, adventurous natures. And the pity of it is that they do not recognize this themselves and refrain from marrying. It would save many a wife a broken heart.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 30 years old. Have been working for the last ten years in the office of a doctor, who is 60 years old. He is very much in love with me. He says he never intends to marry me, but he doesn't want me to have any friends, or to go out with any boy. My sister, who lives in a large city, wants me to come and live with her and tells me she can get me a job with the firm for which she works. Of course, I am not in love with the doctor, but I am getting older every day and want to marry and settle down. What do you advise? JEANETTE.

Answer:
Go at once to your sister. That is a Heaven-sent opportunity to get out of the rut you are in, away from your doctor, and to take a fresh start in life in a new environment. Even if your employer wanted to marry you, he is much too old for you. Thirty years is too great a difference in age between a husband and wife, especially in these times when so many of our customs, thoughts, habits and manners have been revolutionized and when an old husband would be continually finding fault with a young wife because her ideas were not as pre-war as his.

The doctor has frankly told you that he does not intend to marry you, but he is shutting you off from all chances of marrying any other man. That is a horribly unfair and unjust thing for him to do, and you should not let him make you the victim of his selfishness and jealousy.

Another reason for changing your environment is that you will make new acquaintances and among them you may find Mr. Right. A strange girl coming into any new circle always attracts attention. There is something fresh and novel about her that piques men's interest in her, as you will realize when you recall how many girls you know who marry away from home.

Dear Dorothy Dix—A man who is twelve years older than I am and who is very settled in all of his habits wants to marry me. I am very kiddish and like to have a good time. In fact, that is all I think about. Do you think we will be happy and congenial if we marry? HELENE.

Answer:
Certainly not. You would be miserable and probably divorced in a year. No girl should marry until she has had her playtime of life and is ready to settle down and be a fire-side companion.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Leslie's wife was getting so irritated by his slavery to what she deemed a silly, childish fear, that she might have gone on to a divorce. A little timely psychological counsel eliminated the cause of her irritation, and therefore helped stabilize another marriage.

CASE M-165: Leslie W., aged 32, has recently married.
"But we are having so much trouble trying to get an apartment," his wife protested.
"Leslie and I are both sales people, so we are on the road part of each week. We spend the week-ends together here in Chicago."
"It would be a great convenience to both of us if we could rent a small place in an apartment hotel on the near north side."
"But Leslie has such a great fear of fire that he refuses to live in anything but the latest and most modern building. It would be much more economical if we could rent quarters in an older hotel."
"He refuses to spend the night with me when I am in Chicago, for he says he is afraid of fire. He always leaves about midnight and drives clear to Oak Park, where he lives with his mother."
"Dr. Crane, how can he get over this fear of fire?"
DIAGNOSIS:
Leslie is an engineer. He understands that his fear isn't logical for I have since had an interview with him. He lives in a frame dwelling, and sleeps on the second floor.

The hotel where his wife has quarters is more fireproof than his mother's wooden house. He knows that. Then why does he have this fear that he might be burned up? He should spend the night in her hotel.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

Perfect Omelet

Omelets are far more simple than their reputation warrants. The ingredients are few in number and easy to combine. The precautions to observe in securing successful omelets are easy to follow. They are also inexpensive.

A fluffy, tender, and golden brown omelet garnished with one of the innumerable and delectable sauce combinations will not only dress up the lunch or supper for the family, but it will actually whet jaded appetites.

Sometimes an omelet is served plain, sometimes it is served with jelly and powdered sugar, but more often it is served with a thickened sauce, a creamed vegetable or a creamed meat. In this latter form it may well become the main dish of a meal. When accompanied by a crisp salad, a beverage and a dessert, such an omelet provides the entire family with an appetizing, attractive and nutritious menu.

Perfect Omelet
4 egg yolks 1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons milk 1 tablespoon fat
1 teaspoon salt 4 egg whites
Separate eggs. Beat egg yolks until they are slightly thickened and somewhat lighter in color. Add salt, pepper and liquid and beat. Put fat in a frying pan and melt. Do not let brown. Beat egg whites until they are still enough to hold their shape, but not dry. Add the egg yolk mixture slowly to the beaten egg whites combining the two with a folding motion. Do not beat or stir, as this would drive out some of the air incorporated in the whites. It is the expansion of this air that gives the omelet its light and puffy appearance and its delicate texture. Immediately pour the mixture into the heated and buttered pan and put it to cook in the bottom of a moderately hot oven 325 to 350 degrees F. when it has doubled in bulk, which requires about 10 minutes set it on the upper grate of the oven to finish cooking about 10 minutes more depending upon the thickness of the omelet. A successful omelet is cooked only until it is done. If underdone the omelet will fall. If overdone it will become tough and dry. Spread one half of the surface with a thin layer of the hot sauce or creamed meat or vegetable with which it is to be served. Then fold over carefully and pour the remainder of the sauce or creamed vegetable over and around the omelet and serve at once. Serves 4.

Foundation Sauce Recipe
4 tablespoons 1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter 2 cups milk
4 tablespoons flour
Melt butter, add flour and salt. When smooth add the milk slowly. Stir and cook until smooth and thickened.

If cooked meat or vegetables are to be used, they are diced, added to the cooked sauce, and allowed to heat thoroughly before they are served with the omelet.

One cup of diced meat or vegetable is sufficient for the foundation sauce recipe to be used with a four-egg omelet, although the amounts may be varied to suit individual taste.

Cheese Omelet
Prepare a four-egg omelet and two cups of medium white sauce according to the directions previously given. Add 1 cup grated cheese to the cooked white sauce and stir until well blended. Serve with the omelet according to the directions given above.

Leslie Identifies Himself So Thoroughly with the Original Cause of His Fear
He didn't have it while in college, nor for several years thereafter.

Fear of Fire
It really began two years ago. Although he feels the fear of fire even when he is spending the nights in various hotels during his sales trips, he says it is much worse when he comes back to Chicago.

And it seems to be especially aggravated when he reaches his wife's hotel. That building must be intimately related to the original cause of his terror.

So I asked him what experiences he had previously encountered with regard to this particular phobia. And then he confessed that he and a married woman had had an affair in that very building just two years before.

He finally broke off with her because his conscience bothered him. He developed several guilt complexes immediately thereafter. And one of the most persistent was this fire phobia.

It had been deeply impressed on him because at the time he was in this unset state, he chanced to read a detective story in which an increased husband had set fire to the house in which his wife and her paramour were having a clandestine affair.

Complex
Leslie identified himself so thoroughly with the original cause of his terror that he could almost feel the flames licking at his shrinking flesh.

That was the start of his two-year phobia. And every succeeding time that he has surrendered to the fear, this phobia has been more deeply impressed on his brain.

To break such habits, we must first try to trace them to their origin, bringing out this half forgotten core of the complex to the light of full conscious attention.

Next, we must shatter its power by cold analysis, by intellectually dissecting it to bits, and even by laughing at it. Then deliberately break the old habit over and over again, until its dominance is shattered and the opposing habit has been developed.

Youth Doesn't Need Relief That Smoking Gives-Patri

BY ANGELO PATRI
Smoking for boys and girls is a bad practice. They do it only because they see the older ones smoking. The boys think it makes them a whiff closer to manhood, and the girls do it because they see the pictures of fine ladies smoking. No young lady of any public standing is ever pictured nowadays without her cigarette. The girls long to have their pictures before the public, and the nearest they can get to it is to be seen smoking in as many places, in as many attitudes as possible. It is all very childish, and rather sad.

Smoking soothes irritable nerves. It helps those who are in pain to bear it better. It helps those who are troubled in mind to get a little relief. Very good. Youth is not worn with worry, overwork and illness. Youth does not need a sedative for living. Youth needs to feel alive, thrill to its finger-tips, to laugh and dance and play and work to the limit. Cigarettes have nothing to offer that Youth requires.

The activity-of-growth demands plenty of rich, clean blood, plenty of pure air in the lungs. No young person of this generation need be told that his healthy growth and his success in life depend upon the kind of blood he has and upon the power of his lungs and heart. Smoking does not help to keep pure air in the lungs, does not help to keep pure blood flowing through the veins. But it does hinder.

One cannot blame the children for thinking that smoking is delightful when every grown person they meet is smoking. The one who is not is the rare one. Young people think that what older folk do is the thing to do. Teachers and parents have to combat their own practice when they teach children that smoking is not for them.

Yet, grown people have the right to choose their own pleasures. Just as we teach children that they cannot eat the same food that is served to their elders, we teach them that they cannot enjoy the same pleasures their elders enjoy. If they begin smoking at an early age, they are not going to have the same pleasure in it that they will have later on when they have completed their growth and have taken on grown-up responsibilities. They will lessen their chances for healthy growth, healthy thinking and effective work

Petronella sat beside a window. The dark Latin young man who had taken upon himself the job of escorting her, pointed out things of interest, as they went. If she had been feeling less anxious, she might have enjoyed his company. He was attentive, amusing, so good looking, she thought, glancing again at him, that he was almost beautiful. His straight, thick hair was brilliant. One lock fell across his forehead. It gave him a wild, artistic air. He was pale, with straight features, and soft dark eyes.

It was strange, thought Petronella, that nature should have given him such large, nice, ungesticulating hands. At first, when she had allowed him to get into conversation with her, she had judged him to be a professional dancer, a dress designer or even a young man connected with the ballet. But his hands seemed to rule out these professions. His name, she had learned, was Rene Howard. He was French, on his mother's side. He had inherited everything from her, she thought, except his fists. They were "Howard." He was so charming, that she had told him her errand. But she had not admitted that Peter had done anything to merit imprisonment. Now, he said suddenly:

"Miss Mallone, lunch with me at my hotel, the Frankfurt, to talk a little. I believe I can help you, if you will." Petronella's brows lifted a fraction. She met his eyes. But he was smiling with such amusement, and laughed so infectious at her expression, that she was compelled to laugh herself. "You need not be afraid I have no evil designs. Please trust my good-will."

"All right, I'll believe you, but I don't quite see—"

"You have not asked me what I do for a living. Miss Petronella Mallone, now, let me throw myself on your kindness with confession. I do nothing! I am a slacker, a sponge, a barnacle. Therefore I have plenty of time to interest myself in the affairs of other people. Some say harder things than that of me, but I would rather you did not believe them. I am the blue-eyed boy of a particularly wealthy aunt of mine. She is a lonely old woman. She travels continuously. She is ex-hilarating company. She is rather a gay old woman, and she is to be her. So we travel together. Our relationship is continually misunderstood, but I do not care. I have tried steady jobs, and I do not like work. People can think what they

New Administration Policy:
II. The Way Out

In my article on Tuesday I argued that the failure of the purge and the Republican gains in the 1938 elections marked the end of a political era. The New Dealers lost control of the Democratic party, and the divided party is on its way to losing control of the country. But a political change of this kind must of course, reflect some condition in the life of the people, and so we must try to understand what has brought the New Dealers to their present condition.

It is, I believe, that they have reached a dead end on the path they were following. Reduced to its simplest terms, they have established a system by which a substantial portion of the national income is being redistributed by political devices. The doubling of the Federal expenditures does not represent the whole of this political redistribution of the national income. In addition to the relief money, the farm subsidies, the public works, the social security program and the subsidies to state and local governments, there also is the wages policy, enforced through the trades unions, through the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board, and the Federal wage fixing.

Given the present national income, the Administration has gone as far as it can go in the political redistribution of that income. In fact, it cannot keep the distribution at the present level for any long time to come. That is why all the spokesmen of the New Deal, beginning with the President, are now saying that salvation depends upon raising the national income from 60 billions to 80 billions or even to 100 billions.

Corporate Directors
Not Making Investments

But when they look at business they find that the corporate directors are not making the investments of capital which would begin to produce this much larger national income. For a time the New

Dealers tried to believe that enough government spending would pump enough "purchasing power" into the community to create such a demand for goods that corporate investors would find it profitable to expand. This has been the theory of Mr. Eccles. But it does not work because the profits that government spending offers are not great enough to overcome the risks that investors fear.

These risks are of two kinds. There is the risk of new political measures which will create new burdens. And then, there is the fact that even if men were enterprising and took real risks the government will seize the larger profits by taxation if they win but will give them no relief if they lose.

The dilemma of the New Dealers is that they cannot continue to redistribute as much national income as they are now redistributing unless they can induce corporate investors to enlarge the national income. But it is very difficult to induce the investors to invest.

And the reasons are: First, that the investors believe that the New Deal system of redistributing income will enlarge itself under political pressure. Second, that they think the careers of the New Dealers are founded on the willingness to cater to these political pressures. Third, that even if they ignored these apprehensions, and took the risks that could yield large profits, the existing tax laws, particularly the capital gains tax, mean that they cannot hope to enjoy any considerable part of their profits.

Repeal Of Capital Gains Tax Would Help

The Administration is now trying to resolve this dilemma. It is seeking to assure the investors that the New Dealers who set up the system will not, at least for a time, enlarge it. In my article on Tuesday I tried to show why these assurances are not likely to work unless there is a rational organization inside the Administration which places a fair share of responsibility and power in the hands of Democrats who are not New Dealers.

Besides the assurances, the Administration is toying with the idea of a reform of the tax laws that would permit men to take profits commensurate with the risks. This is the President's best hope and if he is bold about it, I believe, the one and only chance he has to bring about such a big recovery that, without a political reorganization, the opposition will be quieted.

By sponsoring promptly the outright repeal of the capital gains tax, he may still at this late date be able to induce such a tide of speculation and investment that he can float his Administration off the rocks on which it is now foundering.

It would be a very bold stroke, and it is hard to say whether the New Deal stalwarts would stand for it or would regard it as a betrayal of the whole New Deal philosophy. But if the President is strong enough with his personal adherents to adopt it, this is the only measure now in sight which has enough energy in it to bring quick and great results.

It is the one measure above all others which could create a sufficient prospect of profit to overcome the deep inertia of business men and investors. Both because of its actual effect in dollars and cents, and because of what it implied as a general social philosophy, it alone might exert the kind of power which will unfreeze the great mass of capital now lying in the banks. It is the one measure which promises to make work what Mr. Eccles has been talking about. For only a great volume of new private capital expenditures can create the revenues to sustain the great volume of public expenditures.

Half Measures Will Not Extricate Roosevelt

If Mr. Roosevelt is still as bold as he used to be, he will see that half measures will not extricate him from the situation in which he now finds himself. The outright repeal of the capital gains tax, accompanied by the modification of some of the other taxes, is not a half measure. It is a stroke at the root of his difficulty, and, though no one can guarantee that it will work, no other measure has much chance of working at all. It would be the kind of action which gave substance to the assurances now pouring forth from Washington.

Coming at a time when the danger of a world war is definitely less, it could give the country the breathing space of a period of high prosperity. Perhaps in that period the country could find a way to deal with its deeper difficulty: the difficulty of getting control over pressure groups demanding an indefinite and illimitable distribution by political devices of the national income of the people.

Jays Could Spoil Neenah's Record

Rockets Would Lose Title Share if Beaten Saturday Night

NEENAH — Neenah and Menasha High school cagers will close the Northeastern Wisconsin conference season Saturday night with the annual Twin City clash. The varsity tilt will start at 8 o'clock in the Neenah gymnasium and will be preceded by two preliminary games.

Reserve teams of the two schools will clash at 8 o'clock while the evening will open with a tilt between junior high school teams of the two schools. Officials for the varsity tilt will be A. C. Denny and Werner Witte, both of Appleton.

The Red Rockets will risk their chances for a share of the Northeastern Wisconsin conference title in the game. Shawano cagers have closed their season with an 11 and 1 record. The Red Rockets need a victory Saturday night to clinch their half of the title.

The Bluejays have had an up and down season in the conference. They have looked good at times and at other times have given dismal performances. A victory for the Jays Saturday night would do much to atone for the season.

Neenah won 10 games and lost one. The Jays have won four and dropped seven. Scoring statistics give the Red Rockets a decided advantage. The Rockets have scored 132 field goals and 73 free throws for a total of 337 points, an average of better than 30 per game. They have held their opponents to 77 field goals and 56 free throws, 210 points or 19 per game. The Neenah team has a spread of 11 points in its favor between defensive and offensive averages. The Neenah team has committed 113 fouls and opponents have been charged with the same number of miscues.

Four of Coach Ole Jorgensen's cagers will be playing their final conference game. They are Captain Dan Schmidt, Warren Kettering, Leo Peterson and Harold Hackstock. Schmidt is the leading scorer on the team with 124 points. Harland Hesselman, junior guard, is close behind with 120 points.

Warren Kettering is third with 66 points but still has more than the leading Bluejay scorer, Leo Peterson and Buxton Kettering, reserve player, have 49 points. Hackstock, most valuable man on the Neenah team from the point of team play and feeding the ball to his mates, has scored 27 points. Flu has hampered the Rockets in their drills this week but all members of the squad will be in uniform Saturday night.

Jays Outscored
The Jays have been outscored by opponents this season. They have scored 112 field goals and 52 free throws for 276 points, an average of 25 per game. Opponents have gained an edge over the Jays in the free throw department. They scored only 109 field goals but have converted 74 free throws for 292 points or 27 per game.

The Menasha team has committed 143 fouls to rank among the roughest teams in the conference. Opponents have committed only 169 fouls. The Jays have averaged better than 10 field goals and slightly under 5 free throws per game. Neenah has averaged 12 field goals and better than six free throws per game.

Five of Coach N. A. Calder's squad of 11 men are seniors. They include four of the starters, Donald Drucks, William Resch, Henry Landskron and Harry Zelinske and John Kuester, substitute guard. Douglas Anderson, junior, probably will be the fifth Bluejay in the starting lineup.

The reserve team game is expected to attract almost as much interest as the varsity tilt. In the first meeting between the two schools, Menasha reserves scored a 22 to 18 victory over the Neenah Boes. The Neenah varsity scored a 34 to 21 victory over Menasha in the first game between the two schools. The Jays have shown improvement since that game.

TONIGHT'S GAMES

Ripon at Lawrence.
Knox at Beloit.
Cornell at Coe.

THOUGH Lawrence college cagers have had a rather dismal season, they have a chance to scale Midwest conference heights in a crucial game with Ripon, current leaders, at 8 o'clock this evening at Alexander gymnasium and intend to send the visitors home on the wrong end of the score.

Four teams still have a chance to cop the title and the fate of three of them depends upon a Lawrence victory tonight. If the Redmen win, they will have a clear claim to the championship.

A glance at the standings would seem to indicate the tilt will be rather one-sided, but that's only half the story. Only four points separated the totals of the two teams last Thursday on Ripon's floor and Lawrence is noted for playing its best games at home. So as far as predictions go, the teams are even and it will be every man for himself in what is expected to be one of the fastest tilts of the season.

Traditional Rivals
Rivalry between the schools is always at white heat and tonight will be no exception. The Vikings have been handicapped in recent games by influenza but the boys are fully recovered and are rarin' to reassert their ability in conference circles via a triumph over the Ripon squad.

Ripon again will have the size advantage and, with the disputed title in sight, will be keyed to the limit. Balliet, Horky, Johnson and Larson are the men to be reckoned with in the Ripon lineup.

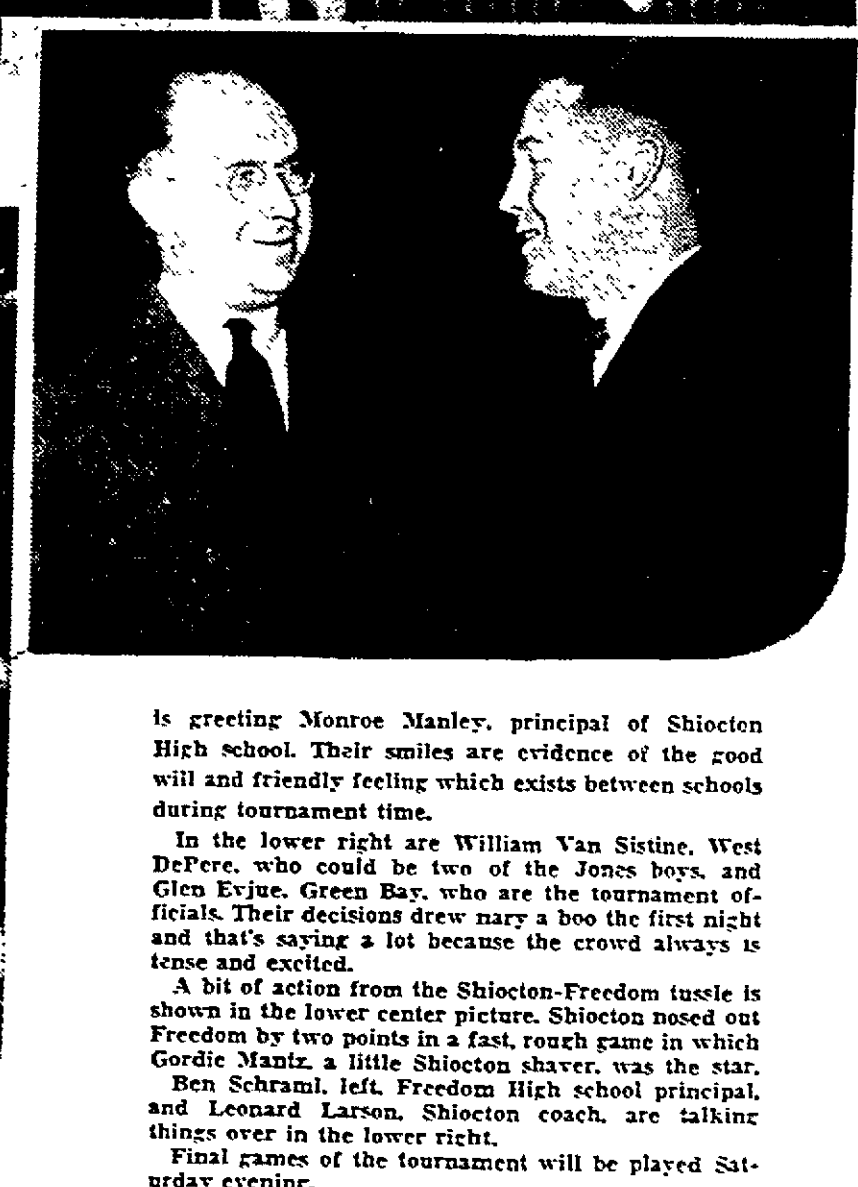

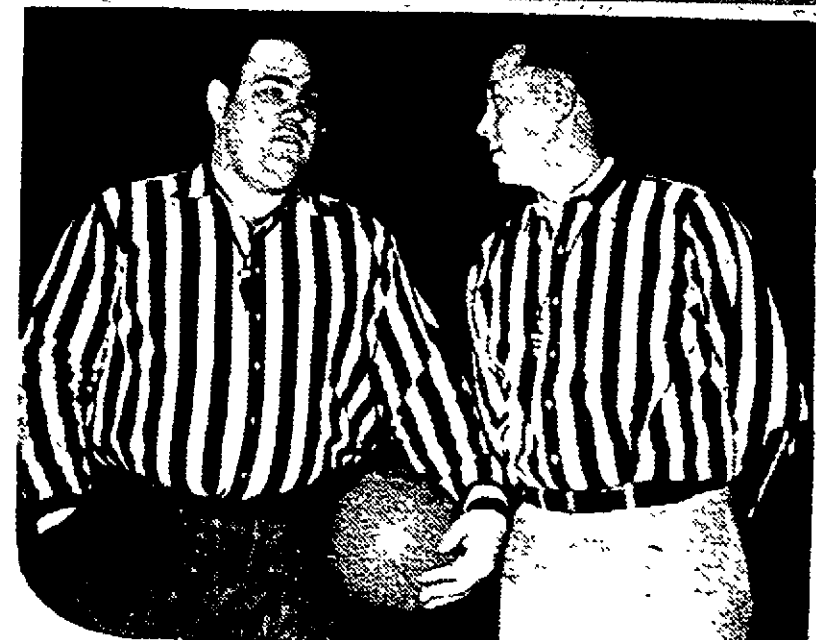

Three seniors will be playing their last games for Lawrence. They are Norm Faleide, high scoring guard and all-around spark plug; Charlie Schuess, forward who has come into his own after grinding through drills for three years, and Harry Jackson, forward who boasts a nice eye and can cause plenty of trouble. Ken Buesing at guard and Bill Masterson will round out the starting lineup.

WOULD BE FIRST TITLE
Ripon — Don Martin, Ripon college cage coach, has tossed sleeplessly these nights as he awaited his team's final game of the season at Appleton against the Lawrence Vikings Friday night. The contest will decide whether Ripon has the right to wear the Midwest conference cage crown for the current season. It's the first time, incidentally, that Ripon has ever been within reaching distance of that glowing prize.

Boger men haunted Coach Martin's disturbed dreams. He fears the flu germ which still snipes insidiously at his boys. He fears the effects of the "pressure" under which his squad labors. He fears a repetition of the cool, intelligent game that the Vikings paraded at Ripon last week.

Against Carroll here Tuesday night, Ripon was way off form. Balliet, Johnson, Bloecher and Gatzke revealed that the flu which was supposed to have been conquered a week ago, still had the boys down.

There's Nothing Like a District Cage Tournament for a Hectic Evening

For unadulterated action, there are few sport events which can compare to a high school basketball tournament and the Class C district meet at Seymour is a typical example. Frills and thrills are packed into the contest and the accompanying pictures tend to show what awaits the fan at the Seymour tourney which is now underway.

In the upper right is the Seymour High school band which whoops things up in line style. While not very large, the musical aggregation "pours it on" with plenty of volume and pep and is a sure preventative for any lull in the proceedings.

The three girls in the upper right are Shiocton cheerleaders and it is easy to see how the team won its opening game with the trio eliciting a wealth of vocal support for the boys. Showing off their tassets are, from left to right, Barbara Jean Kueher, Ruby Last and Bernadine Stevenson.

In the center picture is E. T. Hawkins, principal of Seymour High school and tournament manager, who is greeting Monroe Manley, principal of Shiocton High school. Their smiles are evidence of the good will and friendly feeling which exists between schools during tournament time.

In the lower right is William Van Sistine, West DePere, who could be two of the Jones boys, and Glen Elyue, Green Bay, who are the tournament officials. Their decisions drew many a boo the first night and that's saying a lot because the crowd always is tense and excited.

A bit of action from the Shiocton-Freedom tussle is shown in the lower center picture. Shiocton nosed out Freedom by two points in a fast, rough game in which Gordie Mantz, a little Shiocton shaver, was the star. Ben Schraml, left, Freedom High school principal, and Leonard Larson, Shiocton coach, are talking things over in the lower right.

Final games of the tournament will be played Saturday evening.

Sabin Trounces Tidball in Meet

Oregonian May Make Clean Sweep of Championships in All Events

New York — Because he was ill most of the year, Wayne Sabin didn't play enough tournament tennis last summer to rate a national ranking. But the blackhaired, chunky youngster from Portland, Ore., didn't let the time go awasting.

He attended all the tournaments, watched the leading players with analytical eyes, and today, largely as a result, is in the final round of the national indoor championship.

Seeded No. 1 in his second quest for the board-court title — his first ended in disaster when he wrenched his knee in last year's semifinal — he is such a predominant favorite that it should make little difference whether Frank Bowden or Channucey D. Steele, Jr., wins today's other semifinal. Neither looks to be much against Sabin who mopped up the floor with Jack Tidball yesterday.

The crisp-hitting Oregonian, in fact, is quite likely to make a clean-up of the championship. With John Shoetrom of Chicago, he is in the semifinal round of men's doubles,

Marion Takes Two Overtimes to Beat Wega Team 31-26

Game Ends 26-All; Iola And Rosholt Win Games Handily

IOLA TOURNAMENT
(Class C District)
LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS
Marion 31, Wega 26 (two overtimes)

10:34, Tiger 25
Rosholt 20, Scandinavia 11

TONIGHT'S GAMES
7:15—Wega versus Tiger
8:15—Bear Creek versus Amherst
9:15—Iola versus Marion

IOLA — Marion needed two overtimes to beat Wega 31-26 in the best of three games played in the Class C district basketball tournament here last night. The teams were tied 26-all at the end of the game and neither could score in the first overtime. Marion gathered five points in the second extra period to gain the victory. Daley, Marion forward, made seven baskets for high point honors.

The game kept spectators in an uproar as the teams frequently swapped the lead and were seldom more than two points apart. Marion led 7-5 at the end of the first quarter and the halftime score was 14-11.

A Wega player shot for the hoop just as the gun went off and made the basket, but the referee ruled the score had been made after the game was officially over and ordered an overtime. Wega scoring was evenly divided, each man getting at least two baskets.

Iola and Rosholt were the masters of their respective games and had little trouble winning. Iola beat Tiger 34-25 and Rosholt nearly doubled the score on Scandinavia 20-11.

Asks Football be 'Given Back' to The Student Body

University of Michigan President Denounces Present Status

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—(AP)—Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, asserted in his annual report today football should be abolished unless it is "given back" to the students for educational purposes.

The game, he said, has degenerated to a ridiculous extent into an "extravagant spectacle . . . from which no worthwhile advantage will ever accrue."

"If football cannot be given back to the students . . . for educational purposes it had better be abolished before it contaminates other sports which up to the present have not developed the evils now so apparent in football," Dr. Ruthven said.

He also asserted the game had developed from a "means of inculcating ideas of team play and good sportsmanship into an absurdly competitive sport about which tend to spring up all the evils characteristic of professional competition among those whose sole desire is to win."

"Our colleges and universities cannot afford to become anything but educational institutions," he said "and they should leave overemphasized competition in sports to the promoters of racing, prize fights, and other professional sports."

FROM RACQUET TO PEN —by Phil Berube

Fans Think Owner Riddle Was Running Fever, Not His Horse

BY GAYLE TALBOT
IAMI, Fla. — (AP) For two days now, Hialeah park, the swanky local horse track, has seethed with displeasure at Owner Samuel D. Riddle's action in withdrawing War Admiral from tomorrow's $50,000 Widener cup race.

His action undoubtedly was a blow to the quality of the race. The Admiral and Stagehand had looked like they would go to the post about equal favorites. With the Admiral out, interest has cooled off, and Stagehand is an odds-on

Criticize Riddle
Sure enough, many fans and a smattering of experts were convinced it was Owner Riddle who was running a temperature, not the Admiral. They think Owner Riddle got the shakes after watching Stagehand tie the world record for a mile and a furlong in the McLennan Memorial stakes a fortnight ago, and so chose the first excuse to scratch the Admiral and avoid the issue.

This hardly seems fair, as I see it. After all, here was a man passing up a chance at a big wind of cash, and its scarcely conceivable any man would turn his back on that amount of money out of pride in a horse. The victory, too, would have carried the Admiral to within about $60,000 of the lifetime winning record of $375,744 set by Sun Beau. Now his chances of equaling the mark probably are gone for good.

Other Viewpoint
Friends of Riddle say he feels this way: sure, he probably could have run the Admiral tomorrow without any real damage to the horse, and the Admiral might have won. But, on the other hand, would it have been fair to the public, which doubtless would have placed many a dollar on the great son of Man O'War? There's much to be said for this viewpoint.

Prospects are that Stagehand's admirers will back him post time about 7-10 favorite by down time tomorrow, with the co-entry of Sir Damien and Pasteurized Second Bull Lea 4-1. Mythical King, Francesco and Teddy Weed merely were expected to round out the field.

TRAIN AT CRANBROOK
Detroit — Gus Henderson, newly appointed coach of the Detroit Lions in the National Football league, announced today that the Lions would return to Cranbrook school at Birmingham, Mich. for their pre-season training. Detroit has trained at Cranbrook for the last four years.

Lake Charles, La. — A wide-open scramble developed today among the Philadelphia Athletics for the third-base post held last year by Bill Werber. A definite holdout, Werber says he may not play this year and even if he does, Connie Mack has declared the job goes to whoever shows the most promise.

St. Petersburg, Fla. — Flooded highways in some sections of the south were blamed today by St. Louis Cardinals for late reporting. Among the late arrivals were Johnny Mize and Terry Moore.

Lakeland Fla. — Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe is hopeful of regaining his old form. He took a long turn in the pitcher's box yesterday, using both curves and speed, and came out cheered.

Ohio State Will Battle Purdue in Feature Struggle

Buckeyes Have Stiffer Assignment Than Indiana Has at Michigan

CHICAGO — (AP) — Purdue, the Big Ten's defending basketball champion, has no lien on the 1939 championship, but it is still the team to beat so far as Ohio State is concerned.

They clash at Columbus tomorrow night in their closing game of the season with Purdue in position to ruin the same championship picture it created for the Buckeyes by upsetting first place Indiana last Monday.

As a result of the Indiana defeat, which snatched a one-game Hoosier victory string, Ohio State will enter its final tilt for first place. Each of the leaders has won nine games and lost two.

A victory will assure the Hoosiers or Buckeyes at least a share of the crown. Observers are agreed, however, Ohio State has a much stiffer assignment in fourth place Purdue than Indiana faces tomorrow at Michigan. The Wolverines have won only two games and are tied with Chicago for last place.

Three-Game Card
The games headline a three game card tomorrow and will determine the individual scoring leader of the conference as well as the championship winner.

Jimmy Hull, Ohio State forward with a 30 point lead over the rest of the field, needs only three points to nose out Lewis "Pick" Dehner of Illinois for point honors. Illinois completed its schedule Monday with Dehner finishing with a total of 151 points.

Tomorrow night's other game brings together Wisconsin and Chicago on the midway.

Three more contests, the final on the Big Ten schedule, will be played next Monday but will have no bearing on the championship.

If Pegler Ran a Night Club He'd Bar All the Moochers

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York — If I were fixing to set a trap at the New York world's fair I would call it police headquarters, stick a couple of those green lights in front and try to get ennobled by the mayor or the police commissioner. Maybe they would seize me for impersonating a police station, and if so I would get some loud, cheap lawyer to habeas-corpus the joint, which would be enough.

We would have no cuff in our plant. We would be strictly sleeveless, and all the debts, both male and female, the broken-down society tramps of both sexes, the tablecloth authors and playwrights, the men-about-town and the whole class of moochers of the night side of New York would be barred.

We would announce that all customers would have to lift their weight, and that would scare them off, but just for a gag we would get up circulars of all the celebrities who are commonly mentioned in the columns dealing with saloon society, using their pictures wherever possible, and hang them on the walls of headquarters, offering a reward of $50 for proof that any one of them ever bought a drink. That would be a safe offer.

Their kind of trade brings publicity, to be sure, but what good is publicity if the free-loaders shove the cash customers off into the alcoves or crowd them out entirely? I just don't see how some of our night side operators get by with the mooching that goes on today. The seignior trade, the bum society trade and the celebrity trade all create a large bundle of clippings in the course of a year, but I am not Mr. Zero and you can have that business. I will take the tourist and the honest local yokel out for ten bucks' worth of Saturday night.

I would treat them all right, too. I wouldn't kid anybody. I would announce that our regular $1.50 drink could probably be duplicated for from 35 to 50 cents in any one of a thousand beereries around town and admit that the margin was the jailer's graft or lug—a familiar practice in most American institutions of his kind. Food is really a nuisance in saloon type restaurants, and maybe after a while we would get down to the point of leaving a paper-mache sandwich at each plate or just painting a portrait of a slice of ham on each plate.

Food isn't much. Help For Celebration

When people go out rejoicing they want gin, rum, rye, scotch and maybe a few layers of brandy for the small hours. We would keep some cheap champagne on hand, too, in case of couples out celebrating their fifteenth or twentieth wedding anniversaries with the in-laws and business customers.

I took a friend into Jack White's one night, and when this friend ordered scrambled eggs about 1 in the morning there was the damnedest row in the kitchen that you ever did hear. The cook and the dishwasher poked their heads in to see what the guy looked like who was ordering food, and when the eggs finally came the busboy was two jumps ahead of the waiter with a whole tray of bicarb, bromo, bismuth and chewing gum.

Police Headquarters Is Not A Sacred Name

I hear we have a place in town called the fire house, but the police station would top that. For my part I have always wanted one of those comfortable police sergeant's chairs, canted somewhat back, with big side arms. We would have that kind of chairs all around. We would have a desk inside the entrance, with a sergeant on duty in uniform to formally book the customers before turning them over to the turnkeys to be ushered to their cells.

Naturally, they wouldn't have to sign their square names, and, of course, we wouldn't search them unless that became necessary along toward closing time. I don't think it

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—You'll never see his name on the billboards, the picture press releases, but Art Miles, in my opinion, rates as one of Hollywood's real, though unsung heroes.

About eight years ago, Metro-Goldwyn-Navy dressed him in a monkey suit for a bit in one of the Tarzan pictures, and Mr. Miles, after all the pros and cons, decided that being a monkey was not such a bad business as the wise-crackers would have you believe. He decided to become a professional gorilla—the best in all the world. And between odd jobs, for the next five years, he spent a major portion of his time in the San Diego zoo, just sitting on a bench in front of the huge cage which houses that institution's two gorillas. He watched their facial contortions, studied their shambling walk, noted the timber of their voices—and went home to do greatest of all authorities on the habits of a gorilla—and if you doubt my superlative, watch his antics in the Twentieth Century picture, "The Gorilla."

His specially designed suit weighs 100 pounds and it's so thick that no air reaches his body. He can only work in it a few minutes at a time, and even so, he loses an average of four pounds a day—four pounds that he has to gain back by cramming at night. After an unusually long scene, he's in a state bordering on collapse and must rest for half an hour before struggling back into his costume. Off-hand I can't think of another actor who "gives" more for his art, and "gives" so anonymously.

Cuff Notes: Shed no sympathetic tears for Wally Beery—two days after his 15-year-old marriage shoaled, he was ringsiding at the night clubs with an unknown pretty, and he's been at it ever since. . . . Don't laugh, but Jack Roper, the local heavyweight who's to fight Joe Louis come spring, is doing his training by swapping screen punches with Fred MacMurray in a Paramount picture. . . . Janet Beecher has written a play which will be given a Broadway fling. . . . Irene Dunne has marked that Georgia vacation "Deferred" because she wants to see her latest film previewed before leaving town—it's so sexy, she's worried. . . . It's a comeback for Ralph Graves with a leading role in "Street of Missing Men" for spring board. . . . Stand by for an early wedding announcement from Janet Gaynor and Adrian—they'll trek to the altar soon after April Fool's Day. . . . Robert Montgomery and Director Bill Wellman are shopping for two more partners in their independent production venture—they will make at least two ultra-arties. . . . That broken hand of Richard Dix's hurts the studio even more than it does him—they've had to delay shooting for a week on "Man of Conquest." . . . Don't be too sorry for Mrs. Clark Gable—my Nevada operative writes that she's having herself a time up there while waiting for her divorce which is due next Monday. . . . Franchot Tone will return to Hollywood come June whether he's signed for a picture or not. . . . Brian Aherne, who's been a synonym for romance to I-can't-count-those-many stellar ladies, is now saying it's flowers to Norma Shearer. . . . It's big-scale farming for Clark Gable—he's just stocked his ranch with 12,000 baby chicks. . . .

Bells and No-Bells: The one bright spot of an otherwise disappointing week is: "Spirit of Culver," not a colossal but well entertainment nevertheless. . . . A respectful salute to Peter George Lynn for his fine performance in "Mystery Plane"—so good he was signed for two important roles the night of the preview. . . . Chiding boys to those stars who insist on taking senseless risks in planes and on the polo field—thereby jeopardizing the jobs of hundreds and costing their studios thousands of dollars in hopped-up insurance premiums. . . . And a carillon to Jimmy Cagney who, without benefit of publicity, has been sending truckloads of food to the indigent dust bowl refugees. . . .

Seven-year-old John Sheffield, playing his first role in "Tarzan in Exile," didn't like the idea of acting and could only be persuaded by the promise of a special bonus. It's guaranteed in his contract with M-G-M. On completion of the picture, he will be formally presented with a bicycle!

Ian Hunter is peddling a hilarious tale of woe. Seems that he started for the race track tomorrow afternoon, and half-way there, had a flat tire. When he tried to pay the service station attendant for changing it, he discovered that he had left his wallet at home. He drove back to Hollywood and, consequently, missed the first three races.

IN SHOW AT APPLETON THEATER

Maureen O'Sullivan and Henry Fonda come to the Appleton Theater for one week starting today in "Let Us Live." It is a story of young lovers suddenly plucked from their everyday obscurity by circumstances beyond control. The boy is accused and convicted of murder; the girl wages a desperate battle to convince the world of his innocence. Ralph Bellamy, Alan Baxter, Stanley Ridges and Henry Kolker are also featured. Loretta Young and Warner Baxter are co-stars in the slambang comedy romance "Wife, Husband and Friend," which is the other big bit playing with "Let Us Live." It's smart, gay and hilarious! The laugh hit of the year!

And scarcely had he entered the Santa Anita club house than he was summoned by telephone, back to the studio for a one-line retake. The line was: "Thanks for a delightful afternoon." (Copyright, 1938)

End Worry Over Europe, Babson Advises People

Forget War Scare and Let Business Improve, He Suggests

Babson Park Fid. — The war scare of last September pulled business up short throughout the world. Radio announcers, press dispatches, bulletin boards all screamed war. Retail trade slowed down; business men were terrified; investors dumped securities. We had a minor panic.

As a result, the sharp business recovery which started in June 1938 and carried on through July and August was almost snuffed out. It was well into mid-October before people stooped shaking and trembling over the straw war built up by hysterical radio commentators and frenzied press dispatches. The American public was fooled into thinking that the poker game going on in Europe would end up in a real war!

If the press services and radio bulletins had played up the very optimistic and encouraging domestic news of the moment, as prominently as they played up this poker game, business would probably have gone on just as usual. In my thirty-five years' experience of business observing, I cannot recall a situation which was more over-played and over-emphasized than last September's war scare! Now, it looks like a repetition of the Czech crisis could easily be reenacted. Today's news is filled with war rumors. Every move the dictators make is analyzed and dramatized. The columnists are all broiled up over the U. S. armament plans and foreign policy. The public is getting jittery. Business men are holding up their orders. Uncertainty is gaining the upperhand. "I'm going to see what Hitler does next before I buy anything" is the typical comment of the day.

Yet the foreign situation has not changed. Everyone knows that Hitler intends to push on toward the east and that Germany and Russia some day may struggle in a real war. Mussolini should be held either by cash or otherwise for his good work in Spain. England and France, however, are in no more danger of a conflict now than they were a year ago or three years ago.

Domestic Business Sound. Moreover, the domestic business situation is sound. There has been no change in the basic picture since two months ago. At that time I outlined the reasons why business should be better in 1939 than in 1938. I see no reason yet to change my forecast even though business is running slightly lower than in mid-December. However, I expect that we will have a sharp improvement this spring.

Why should we worry about hostilities in Europe? As I pointed out last fall, the World War pushed American business to undreamed of heights. It is true that the first outbreak produced a sharp drop. Within a few months after hostilities started, however, all records were being smashed. If Europe again sees a real war the combatants will need billions of dollars worth of our raw materials, food stuffs, and manufactured goods. So why be scared to death because of the possibility of a war in Europe which, if we were to follow the World War pattern, would prove bullish on American business?

Play Up Our Own Troubles. Naturally, I do not want war. There is no quicker way to get into one, however, than to talk war, eat war, and live war. That is why I hate to see our people giving such tremendous amount of attention to the European situation. That is why I dislike the constant dramatization of Hitler and Mussolini. There are "goings-on" in this country twice as dangerous to our liberty. These could be blazoned on the front pages and over the airwaves if we must scare ourselves to death.

I am not a "Pollyanna" disciple. I am not urging the press and the radio to play down European news. I am asking only that our domestic news be dramatized and given just as much human interest as the "hot" stories from Europe. There is plenty of good news coming out from industry, from labor, from churches, from yes, even from Washington — to provide an antidote for the unpleasant dispatches from abroad.

I know Europe and I urge readers to forget it for this spring at least. Tend to your business and your job. Now is a chance to make some money while the other fellow is trying to find out where "Ruthenia" is on the map! Read-

Dictionary Display Arranged at Library

An exhibition of dictionaries is being shown this week in the Lawrence college library under the direction of Miss Dorothy Fenton, reference librarian.

The exhibit includes the generally used Webster's new standard unabridged edition, the Century Junior dictionary edited by Thorndyke for children and the New Oxford which is in twelve volumes, each the size of an ordinary dictionary.

A pamphlet entitled, "How Words Get into the Dictionary," traces the progress of a word from the time it is coined until it is accepted and included in the dictionary.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

please. We seldom meet the same people for more than a month. Except in Berlin. My aunt has an apartment in the Wilhelmstrasse. She knows many influential men in Germany. If anyone can help you to see your brother, she can. Since she is always threatening to write her autobiography, this gives her considerable influence. Some illusive change in Rene, while he was speaking, prompted Petrel's intuition to leap in advance of any definite evidence.

"You're being very kind, but why should you trouble? And take the risk of interesting yourself in my affairs? No one told you to travel by this plane, and help me, did they?"

He laughed a moment too late. "Whatever made you think a thing like that?"

"I don't know. Only you came and sat beside me, when we took our places in the plane. I was anxious and flustered. I wasn't looking very attractive. That other woman in black, was much more your type. She was also sitting alone."

"She was not so young. However miserable you may be feeling, you cannot help that. Are you going to come and meet my Aunt Fleur — the Baroness Fleur von Cratz? Her apartment is just next door to my hotel."

Baroness von Cratz

In her mind, Petronella imagined the disapproval of Peter, Martin Rowdon and James, if they could see her. But she believed Rene. She knew he meant an unsophisticated English girl like herself no harm. She could not interest him. She herself, was unattracted by him. But she liked him.

"Yes. I'll come. I need any help I can get."

"We will call on her first thing. It might be that she would have room to put you up."

"I'd rather not do that. I must call at the Hotel Wilhelm. There may be messages for me, from my brother's paper."

"We will call there immediately afterwards."

The Baroness von Cratz was at home. She was seated at a littered desk in an immense room. The purple velvet, ivory laces, and heavy, old-fashioned jewelry she was wearing matched its overpowering, dusty splendor. The Baroness had white hair, dressed in a remarkable tower of roll curls on the top of her head. Her face was large, pale, and doughy, and her eyes mild, sentimental and blue. It was at once incredible, and understandable, that she had once been beautiful. But Petrel was vaguely disappointed in her. She had expected to meet an exceptional personality. Here, she could not help feeling, was a stupid old woman.

"Rene must take you to the Mohit Krankenhaus, as soon as you have got rid of your luggage," said this Aunt Fleur.

"They will not let her see her brother. Her first move should be to see the British Consul General," Rene told her. He spoke sharply, as if dining facts into a thick head. "And you will invite General Furoff to have supper with us at the Adlon, tonight, Aunt Fleur?"

The Baroness looked at Rene. "Very well," she said. Almost as if, when he made her a suggestion, it was a command, thought Petrel, puzzled.

"Did you bring me the beautiful handbag you promised me, Rene?" she asked. "You did not forget?"

"No. It is in my suitcase. As you can see, by looking round this room," he said to Petrel, "my aunt is childish about beautiful things. Come along, Miss Petronella."

Fencing

Peter Mallone stood on the wrong side of iron bars, looking at the sky. The windows in this ward of the Fortress of Glatz were small, and set high in the walls. When he first entered, he had wondered what it was that made this the barest hospital ward he had ever seen. He had realized: "The walls are gray. There are no flowers." Peter was dressed in rough weave prison uniform. His right arm, which hurt him at the shoulder, was in a sling.

Outside, it was a gloriously hot early September day. But in here, despite the shafts of sunshine, it still felt cool. The walls must be very thick. How long would they keep him here? When would he next be grilled with questions by those angry, steel-eyed men, by the stuffed and officious Prussian officers, in the little office down the maze of stone corridors? Had they believed a word he said? Did they think him dangerous, or harmless? He could not tell. Speaking execrable German, he had done his best to sound a fool. He had described his pleasant railway journey from Munich; his finding the admission ticket on the carriage floor, his conclusion that someone was not able to use it, and that anybody else who could, would be welcome.

"We have tickets for everything in England. But anyone can go," he had explained. But some of their questions had been awkward. Why had he thought it worth while going, since he spoke so little German? Why had he taken such interest in political affairs in Germany. He had played the enthusiastic amateur journalist as best he could, but he did not know if they believed him. It was lucky, though tantalizing, he supposed, that his arrest had preceded the chief speaker of the evening. Had that touch on his shoulder occurred half an hour later, he would certainly have been in for it. Not he believed, that he would have learned much more than he had overheard at the bar, before the meeting started. But luckily they did not know that. If only he had not answered that fellow, who purposely asked him for a light. It was humbling, when two words of one's German gave one away. Hell, he was sick of this already. And he might be kept locked up here for weeks. Down the aisle, between the narrow beds, a man on crutches swung himself painfully towards Peter. It was the fellow prisoner who spoke such good English, who had been unjustly discharged from his factory, because of his Jewish ancestry.

who had gone out and got drunk and assaulted a storm trooper. He was coming to talk to him again. He did not look very Jewish, Peter thought. He had fair hair. The man smiled.

"You are getting restless?"

Wasn't he a little too friendly? Suddenly on his guard, Peter listened. As though to confirm his sudden suspicion, his friend plunged back into the same welter of complaint against injustice, of half questions, with regard to the future of what he termed "his people." Questions which he appealed to Peter to answer.

Peter found himself trembling as he turned those questions back again. He wasn't feeling too steady, to start with, thanks to this shout, der, and a sleepless night. The thought of what he might have let out, had not instinct warned him, made him feel sick, trapped, jumpy.

He was still fencing when the door opened.

Petronella walked into the room. He gave a shout of joy. She ran to him with a cry.
